He told by a member because he said he would be moved an amendment like the present, that he should be ashamed to sit with him? Was that what the public expected to hear in its legislative councils? He believed not. He thought it would do him no good who uttered the sentiment."

The speaker retorted by saying that "Mr. Johnson from North Carolina had misstated what he had said in several instances; but he did not think it worth while to set him right—it would be a waste of time and words. There was one thing he would notice, he called him a judge. Was he not in committee of the whole on this subject? Was he more a judge than that gentleman? (Mr. Williams offered to explain.) Mr. D. said, "The gentleman said he had said four times explained himself. If he had anything more to say to that gentleman, it would be a little more pointed. He should say what he pleased, and if he chose he might call upon him in the house or out of the house, (privileges aside.) (A loud cry for order was heard.) Mr. D. said he knew when he was in order. There were seven representatives from Connecticut, then seven from Massachusetts; Joshua Colt, Samuel W. Dana, James Davenport, Chauncey Goodrich, Roger Griswold and Nathaniel Smith. Messrs. Dana, Colt and Goodrich took part in the debate, Mr. Dana saying among other things that "He did not mean to cast the blame upon gentlemen who differed from him in opinion; nor would he envy any gentleman the pleasure they would have in the company of the gentleman from Vermont; if they chose to associate with such a kennel of fifth, let them do so; let them press him to their hearts and salute him as their brother, they may do it without envy; let them be designated as the companions of Mr. Lyon by being pointed at by "Those gods the members of congress who voted to have Matthew Lyon as a companion." If they felt themselves invulnerable to such an attack, he acknowledged he was not attached to them for their insensibility. He himself would put him away as effluents removed impurities and fifth from their docks and wharves."

The amendment for reprimand was negatived. The question on the resolution was carried 51 to 43. The committee of the whole reported to the house. The house adopted the amendment relating to the offensive words used by Lyon in his defense before the committee of the whole, as a vote of censure, to substitute a reprimand for expulsion, but the amendment was defeated by 52 to 44, and the resolution for expulsion was passed by the same vote, 52 to 44, but as a two-thirds majority was necessary for expulsion, it was declared not to be carried.

It will be observed that the vote for expulsion was precisely the strength of the Federalists in the house, while the vote against expul-Federalists, or demonstrating the strength of the Federalists. The discussion lasted from the 30th of January to the 15th of February, and occupied practically the whole attention of the house during that time. The debate and evidence are quite fully reported in the Annals of Debates in Congress.

The vote on the resolution was taken upon the 15th of February, 1798. On the 15th of February another encounter occurred between the parties, which I give in the language of the condensed statement which appears in the Annals as a note to the regular proceedings of the house under that date as follows:

"FRACAS IN THE HOUSE."

"About a quarter past eleven o'clock, after prayers, whilst the speaker was in his chair, and when he had taken their places, and before the house had been read, and before the journal had been read, Mr. Griswold entered the house and observing Mr. Lyon in his place, who was writing, he went up to him with a pretty strong walking stick in his hand, with which he immediately began to beat him with great violence. Mr. G.'s approach was observed by Mr. Lyon, but before he could get from behind his desk he had received some severe blows on the head and back. The floor of the house he endeavored to lay hold of Mr. G. having no stick or weapon in his hand) but he was prevented from doing so by Mr. G.'s falling back, and the continual blows with which he was assailed. At length getting behind the speaker's chair, Mr. L. snatched up the tongs from the fire; the combatants then closed and came down together upon the floor, Mr. G. being uppermost. The members of the house who till now seemed to look on with indifference and who had witnessed an attempt to put an end to it, got round the parties and separated them, but not before Mr. L. had aimed a blow at Mr. G.'s head with the tongs, but which he parried off. The speaker was now called upon to desire the members to take their seats, and form the house. Whilst this was doing, the two enraged members met again without the bar, and but for the doorkeeper and some gentlemen present and arms till he rendered the combatants. Order having been obtained (at least so it was supposed) it was possible to obtain from the agitated state of the house, the clerk proceeded to read the journal, and the business of the day was entered upon. It continued till one o'clock, when from the perturbation which was naturally occasioned by such a scene, and it being evident that business was very little attended to by a great part of the house, a motion for adjournment was made and carried. It will be seen that no notice was taken of this proceeding in the course of the sitting."

On the next day a resolution was introduced for the expulsion of both Lyon and Griswold for "for violent and disorderly behavior committed in the house." This resolution was discussed during the day in the same heated fashion that characterized the former discussion, and was referred to the committee on privileges by a vote of 46 to 36. It was ordered that the yeas and nays be taken. They should put their testimony in writing. Next day Mr. Otis of Massachusetts proposed another resolution to the effect that Griswold and Lyon should be required to pledge their word to the house that they would not commit violence upon each other during the sessions of the house, and that if either one refused, he should be committed to the custody of the sergeant-at-arms till he complied with the obligation. This resolution was carried by a large majority, being 73 yeas in favor of it. Lyon not being in the house, the sergeant-at-arms was sent for him, and when he appeared, the speaker read the resolution to them, and completely justified the measure, although my enemies may condemn the harshness of the remedy, yet my friends will approve of it: the newspapers which have and will appear on the occasion are of no consequence; they may tell lies as usual, but they cannot take off the beating."

And on March 14th, 1798, he writes his friend, Governor Griswold, evidently in reply to a letter in which his father had cautioned him against any further violence, as follows:

"I have no idea of committing any further violence myself; the violence which I committed by chastising the Vermonters has become absolutely necessary. I am reduced to the necessity either of leaving Congress with disgrace to myself, and, in addition thereto, to leave a stigma on the state, which would be instantly thrown at our representative, or to wipe off the stigma by incurring a public chastisement. I choose the latter, as I believe every man who possesses any spirit would have done; and, although I regret the occasion, yet I believe I shall never lament the measure."

Edmund Quincy in his life of his father, Josiah Quincy, who was a co-leader of Griswold, thus speaks of the affair:

"In 1797 he (Lyon) went to Congress, and in early August, in January, 1798, he was the center of a series of personal insult and violence which have disgraced congress from time to time, by spitting in the face of Mr. Griswold of Connecticut on one occasion of offense he took at him, the house refusing to expel him by a strict party vote, Mr. Griswold took justice into his own hands, and caned him in his seat a few days afterwards, for which singular process he too went free, also by a party vote, neither a censure nor a censure was the opposition demanding the two-thirds requisite for the expulsion of a member."

Griswold's excuse for an attack which nearly resembled the attack of Brooks upon Sumner, but fortunately resulted in less serious consequences, as, as will be seen, that the house having refused by a strict party vote to expel Lyon for spitting in his face, there was nothing left for him to do but to make the case in his own hands, and to defend himself by the use of his own honor, and to prevent a stigma and disgrace from attaching to the state and to himself.

Two caricatures of the affair became quite famous—one representing the first occurrence, pictured the Vermonters as in lion with the countenance of a man, bearing a wooden sword, and spitting in Griswold's face, who exclaims, "What a cowardly action." This caricature it was impossible to obtain, and we know of no copy of it.

The other caricature representing the second assault is still in existence, and so curious that I have had it reproduced.

There is little in the history of this incident of which either Connecticut or Vermont can be proud, and yet it may be said of both of the actors that they were men who though widely differing in birth, temperament and education, were types of the political parties of the time, and of the very animosities which rendered in those times the political party kind, affable, and indeed lovable men. Connecticut honors the memory of Griswold, and Vermont honors the memory of Lyon. Reference to the unfortunate contest is valuable only as revealing to our attention the history of the period and serving to remind us that much as we may deprecate some of the features of present political strife in the United States, it is not to the history of the parties of the past, there has been a vast improvement in this respect since the administration of President John Adams.

WALLINGFORD,

Mabel Green, a white woman who had for a year or more been living with V. H. Smith, colored, better known as Captain Tony Smith, on the east bank of Community lake, presumably a housekeeper, died very suddenly early Thursday evening of heart disease, aged thirty-eight years. The woman and Smith were expecting to go to a dance over Middlefield way that evening, but he was taken suddenly ill and went to bed, and Smith started in haste after a doctor, but before he returned the woman died. From the very little is known of her past history any more than she came from Kentucky and was strongly addicted to drink. There were many rumors about that there was foul play regarding her death. Medical Examiner McLaughery was notified of the case and investigated and decided that there was no occasion for the rumors about that she died of heart disease. The woman had no friends and the expense of a funeral was borne by the town.

William E. Johnson, a Cheshire farmer, who here last Thursday driving his 775 horse and his wagon loaded with apples and other farmers' produce. While about the plains he imbibed too much of Colony street whiskey and later discovered that his horse and wagon were missing. Friday morning he reported his loss to Officer Reilly, who telephoned about the various towns but could get no clue of the missing horse and wagon. A man named Johnson said that there was a wagon and driver in the old cart path down toward Oliver's Creek in "Quinn's swamp and upon investigation found that the dead horse was the missing horse of the Cheshire farmer. The horse lay in the path just beyond a wide ditch it tangled up in the harness and shafts where it had fallen and evidently died in a few hours to cause the loss of the horse and wagon. The man was upset and the contents scattered about. Johnson was notified and came over and found and identified his property. How the horse came to be where it was found is a mystery, but it is believed that it was driven down there by some person, or persons, and abandoned to its fate after its fall in crossing the ditch.

A. Booth the liverman let one of his horses Saturday morning to two men to go to a dance in Middlefield. Early Sunday morning the animal was found just outside of the stable on Colony street, having fallen to the ground from exhaustion from hard driving. The two men were not to be seen.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Cook are red by their attending physician, Dr. J. O. McLaughlin, as decidedly improved in condition. Mrs. Cook was to sit up a large portion of yesterday.

There is said to be quite a little romance connected with the early life of Abel Green, who died at William H. Smith's Saturday evening. She came in a good family in Kentucky and her younger days was engaged to married to a wealthy gentleman, but at a short time before the date of wedding day ran off with the protective bride's sister and married her.

An outrageous action on the part of a promised protector made a change in the entire life and for the worse until came here as housekeeper for a poorer man, and is now buried in a man's grave.

According to the fact that the Wallingford letter sent Sunday evening intended for Monday morning's issue, failed to arrive at this office until too late, several items appear this morning which had already been in Monday's issue.

H. Tibbitts started last evening for York.

Club members will have a misfit roller in the club rooms Thursday night.

Mrs. G. A. Upson, Miss May Ingraham and Miss Mary Hall are the delegates from the Congregational Y. P. S. C. to the Christian Workers' convention in New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Phelps will be at home to-day from 3 to 10 o'clock p. m. will be pleased to see their friends.

The funeral of Mrs. Lorenzo Lewis will be at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the house on Main street.

William I. Todd has declined the appointment as auditor tendered him by selectmen.

The funeral of Mabel Green was yesterday afternoon. The burial was in Center street cemetery. Rev. J. E. Edman officiated.

Mr. W. P. Wilson and bride are home from their wedding trip and will remain on William street for the present.

Dr. A. Treat's youngest daughter, Cora, is critically ill with diphtheria.

The ladies of the Library association are making extensive preparations for annual chrysanthemum show in the library on the evening of November 19 or 20. A large assortment of articles suitable for Christmas presents will be of the interesting features.

John A. Martin has bought out the insurance business of Dr. G. H. Andrews.

The condition of the roads about the town is simply terrible and are worse than has been known for many years.

An experiment of a light dressing of crushed stone that was tried on a small portion of Main street proved to be successful and makes a good roadbed at a comparatively small expense. The authorities would do well to imitate the experiment on other places.

A fine crushed stone can be bought at a very low figure.

Deceased Mrs. Leonard's will which was made public last. The deceased besides her real estate in the town owned stock in the Consolidated road, Connecticut Western and New York state railroad.

Senator O. H. Platt was a borough visitor yesterday.

Frank Worden, a former resident, now the undertaking business in Bridgeport, is the guest of W. A. Goodrich.

Must go and see if there's any sense in Malley, Neely & Co.'s alk sale.

The Early Part of the Session Liquidations Were in Order.
New York, Oct. 28.—During the early part of the session at the stock exchange liquidations were the order of the day and certain of the industrials scored material losses. Sugar, Leather preferred and Tobacco were noticeably heavy in this group, while the grangers, Manhattan and the International shares were the weakest among the railways. London cables came lower and the foreigners were sellers of Louisville and Nashville and Reading. Estimates place foreign liquidations to-day at fully 15,000 shares. Accompanying this selling there were reports of an early resumption of gold exports and rumors of trouble in London because of the recent shrinkage in Kaffirs.
At home the continued drought in the winter wheat belt ran on uneasily, and some selling of the western shares. In addition the bears were quite aggressive, especially in the industrials. Sugar, Leather preferred and Tobacco coming in for the most attention. Sugar dropped from 103 1/2 to 101 1/2 and later rallied to 102 1/2. A good deal of lost stock came out, the selling being based on rumors that congress will take up sugar matters shortly after convening. Leather preferred dropped to 72 1/2 to 60 1/2 and Tobacco from 93 to 91 1/2.
The railway list ran on 3 1/4 to 1 1/2 per cent, the International stock south-western and Manhattan leading. Wheeling and Lake Erie preferred, however broke 2 1/4 to 44.
In the afternoon, when it became known that no arrangements had been made looking to gold exports and the St. Paul statement was given out, liquidations ceased and the market gradually assumed a firmer tone. The St. Paul report for September makes an excellent showing, net earnings having increased $240,000. The reduction in operating expenses, officials say, is due to the improved condition of the road.
The afternoon recovery ranged from 1/4 to 2 1/2 per cent, and nearly every stock on the list participated in the upward movement. Tennessee Coal and Iron fell 1 1/2 to 37 1/2 on the announcement that the deal with the Sloss company had been declared off. Subsequently the stock recovered to 35 1/2. In the inactive stocks Metropolitan Traction jumped 4 1/2 to 105 1/2. The market closed firm, with some stocks showing gains of 1/4 to 1 1/4 per cent on the day.
Bonds were irregular, but in the main lower. Sales were $1,115,000.
